TOTAL POPULATION, INCREASE, AND DISTRIBUTION.

Population of the state.—New York was one of the thirteen original states. According to the Fourteenth Census, taken as of January 1, 1920, its population is 10,385,227, which represents an increase of 1,271,613, or 14 per cent, since 1910. During the same period the population of the United States increased by 14.9

per cent. The following summary shows the population of New York from 1790, the year to which the first Federal census related, to 1920, inclusive, together with the number and per cent of increase for each decade, in comparison with the per cent of increase for the United States as a whole:

Counties.—New York has 62 counties, of which only 28 show increases as compared with 1910. (See Table 1.) One new county has been organized since 1910—Bronx, from part of New York County. It has been necessary, therefore, in preparing the maps on page 4, which show rates of increase and decrease in total and rural population, to combine these 2 counties.

Density of population.—The total land area of the state is 47,654 square miles. The average number of inhabitants to the square mile in 1920 is 217.9

(see Table 1), as against 191.2 in 1910 and 152.5 in 1900.

Minor civil divisions.—The political units into which the counties are divided are collectively termed "minor civil divisions." The counties of New York are made up of 990 primary divisions, comprising 932 towns and 58 independent cities. The secondary divisions are 476 in number, comprising 475 incorporated villages and 1 city—Sherrill, in Oneida County, the only city in the state which is not politically independent of the town in which located. Each of the 5 boroughs of New York city is coextensive with the county in which located. Each of 2 villages is coextensive with the town in which located, and each of 49 villages comprises parts of 2 or more towns. There are also within the state 7 Indian reservations, which, although independent of the county organizations, are treated for census purposes as parts of the counties in which located. (See Table 2.)

Cities.—New York has 59 cities, of which 6 have over 100,000 inhabitants and 16 have from 25,000 to 100,000 inhabitants. (See Tables 3 and 4.)

The following summary shows, for each city having 25,000 inhabitants or more in 1920, the population at each census for which figures are available, together with the number and per cent of increase during the preceding decade:

NUMBER AND DISTRIBUTION.

New York city.—The preceding table gives the population for New York city as it existed at the time each census was taken. The figures, therefore, do not relate to the same area for the various census years. Until 1873 the city of New York consisted of what is now Manhattan borough. Annexations were made in that year, and others in 1895 and 1898, the organization of the city into the existing five boroughs having been made on January 1, 1898. The following table gives the population of the present area of the city and of each of its boroughs as returned at each Federal census from 1790 to 1920. (The figures for 1890 and earlier census years include estimates for those parts of the towns of Eastchester and Pelham which became parts of Bronx borough in 1895 and for that part of the town of Hempstead which became a part of Queens borough in 1898, but the possible margin of error in these estimates is so small as to be negligible in comparison with the total population of the boroughs in question.)

Urban and rural population.—The Census Bureau defines urban population as that residing in cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more, and rural population as that residing outside such incorporated places.

The following summary presents, for the last three censuses, figures showing the urban and rural population of the state distributed among places grouped according to specified limits of population. The classification for each census is based upon the population of the various places as shown by the returns of that census. Consequently the territory comprised within any one class of cities or that designated as urban or as rural does not remain fixed, since any given place may, through the growth or the decline of its population, pass from one class to another at successive censuses. The proportion of the population of New York living in places of 2,500 or more increased from 72.9 per cent in 1900 to 78.8 per cent in 1910 and to 82.7 per cent in 1920.

TABLE 1.—AREA AND POPULATION OF COUNTIES: 1850 TO 1920.

[In computing the increase from 1890 to 1900 for certain counties the population of Indian reservations in 1900 has been deducted from the total population of the county. In order to make it comparable with the total for 1890, which does not include the population of Indian reservations. The deductions thus made for the several counties are as follows: Cattaraugus, 1,982; Chautauque, 31; Erie, 1,305; Franklin, 1,253; Genesee, 346; Niagara, 337; Onondaga, 530.]

[A minus sign (—) denotes decrease.]
